ADVISORY BUSINESS

Johnson's Global Advisors is a privately owned Nevada company headquartered in Las Vegas, NV. The principal owner is Martin V. Johnson Jr., Chief Executive Officer.

Advisory Services Offered

We provide our clients with low-cost investment management services with respect to their investment accounts. We will manage accounts principally on a discretionary basis, which means our clients give us the authority to buy and sell securities for their accounts at our discretion ("discretionary authority"). We will provide services on a non-discretionary basis as well.

Johnson's Global Advisors has the ongoing responsibility to select and make recommendations, based upon the objectives of the client, as to specific securities or other investments that we purchase or sell in client accounts.

Johnson's Global Advisors provides portfolio management services to clients through managing portfolios designed to mimic the holdings and allocations of various published, blended and customized indices.

The majority of portfolios Johnson's Global Advisors manage for our clients invest exclusively in global/international equities and fixed income index utilizing strategies whose objective is tracking the client specified index, available through separately managed or commingling accounts.

Johnson's Global Advisors specializes in managing well-balanced and globally-diversified client accounts. We use stock and bond index funds, mutual funds and Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) that have similar characteristics as index funds. Index funds are mutual funds or ETFs that aim to achieve the same return as a particular market index or asset class.

We provide our investment management services to our clients by managing their accounts according to the particular investment strategy selected by the client. We apply the client's selected investment strategy based on the client's general financial and tax situation.

Johnson's Global Advisors provides its portfolio management services to individuals, banks, thrift institutions, pension plans, profit sharing plans participants, trusts, endowments, charitable organizations, and corporations. Each client has the opportunity to place reasonable restrictions on the types of investments to be held in the portfolio or to customize the portfolio's goals and objectives. Each portfolio is designed to track the performance in the client's account to reflect changes within the index.

There will typically be some variation between the performance of a client's account and the index it is designed to track, due to client-imposed trading restrictions, client contributions to and withdrawals from accounts, timing of trades, timing of cash flows resulting from mergers and acquisitions affecting portfolio holdings, advisory fees and trading costs, among other factors.

Termination of Agreement

A client agreement may be canceled at any time, by either party, for any reason upon receipt of 30 days written notice, or such other period as may be agreed upon, in writing, by the parties. Upon termination of any account, any fees due will be charged to the client in the event of any prepaid fees. In the event that there are any unearned fees, they will be promptly refunded to the client.

The client has the right to terminate an agreement without penalty within five business days after entering into the agreement in the event of a client's death or disability, we will continue management of the account until an authorized party notifies us of client's death or disability and provides alternate instructions.

Billing Method

Our investment management fees are charged and payable quarterly in arrears following the end of each calendar quarter. The management fee payable by client to advisor will be calculated and charged as follows: One-fourth of the annual management fee payable to advisor will be charged each quarter based upon the account's market value on the last business day of the applicable quarter. "Client Relationship" is defined as an individual; his or her spouse or domestic partner; his or her minor children; a business or non-profit entity over which the individual and/or other person exercises exclusive control and trust as to which the individual defined above is the sole trustee. We will aggregate client accounts that have family or business relationships with each other for purposes of calculating the investment management fees.

The formula used for terminating client account investment management fees is as follows: $[\text{Value of assets}] \text{ on the close on the date of termination} \times \{ \text{a Factor Equal to the Number of Days' assets Were in a Client's account in the Calendar Quarter} \} / \{ \text{Number of Days in the Calendar Year} \} \times \{ \text{annual Fee Rate} \}$

For investment management fee calculation purposes, a "calendar quarter" is a period beginning on the first day of the month during a new calendar quarter (January, April, July and October) and ending on the last day of the month of a calendar quarter (March, June, September and December).

"day" is any calendar day including weekends and holidays. We will withdraw our investment management fee from each client's account at Vanguard/Charles Schwab or current custodian. We will withdraw our investment fee with the client's written authorization. Custodian withdraws investment management fees from the client's account based on our written authorization upon termination. We will instruct custodian to debit all outstanding unpaid investment management fees.

All clients will receive brokerage statements from custodian no less frequently than quarterly. The custodian statement will show the deduction of the investment management fee withdrawn directly from their account. We do not require or accept investment management fees in advance.

Other Fees and Expenses

Our investment management fees do not include custodian fees. Clients pay all brokerage commissions (transaction fees), stock transfer fees, and/or other similar charges incurred in connection with transactions in accounts from the assets in the accounts.

We describe additional information about brokerage in brokerage practices below. In addition, any mutual fund shares and/or ETFs held in a client's account will be subject to fund-related fees and expenses that are described in the prospectus of the mutual fund or ETF. All fees paid to Johnson's Global Advisors for investment management services are separate and distinct from the fees and expenses charged by index funds, mutual funds and ETFs.

Other Compensation

Neither Johnson's Global Advisors nor any person providing investment advice on its behalf ("investment personnel") accepts any compensation or revenue in connection with the management of client accounts, except for the investment management fees charged directly to clients as stated in the Fee Schedule above.

ITEM 6. PERFORMANCE BASED FEES

Neither Johnson's Global Advisors nor any of its investment personnel, charge performance-based fees that are based on a share of capital gains on, or capital appreciation of, the assets of a client.

ITEM 7. TYPES OF CLIENTS

ITEM 8.

METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES AND RISK OF LOSS

Johnson's Global Advisors generally use diversification in an effort to optimize the risk and potential return of a portfolio. More specifically, we utilize multiple asset classes, investment styles, market capitalizations, sectors, and regions to provide diversification. Johnson's Global Advisors general investment strategy is to seek a total return proportionate to the level of risk the client decides to take.

We assist each client in developing an Investment Policy Statement (IPS), which typically outlines the client's general financial situation, investment objectives, liquidity needs, time horizon, return objective, and risk tolerance, as well as any special considerations and/or restrictions the client chooses to place on the management of the client accounts.

We will then make model investment allocation recommendations, either aggressive, moderate or conservative, that are consistent with the client's IPS. Client accounts with a similar investment objectives and asset allocation goals may own the same or different securities. Tax factors also influence investment decisions. Clients who buy or sell securities on the same day may receive different prices based on the timing of the transactions during open market hours. Each client will maintain a target asset allocation.

Johnson's Global Advisors utilizes ETFs and full index replication techniques, whenever possible, in which all or substantially all equities in the appropriate index (or product specific portion of the index) are held in the client's portfolio, subject to client-imposed restrictions, in the appropriate allocations. Generally, we review client accounts quarterly to evaluate the extent to which the actual allocation matches the target allocation.

When we consider the variance excessive, based on an upper and lower limit band that is subject to change based on the parameters outlined in the IPS, we will take appropriate actions (by buying or selling securities) to bring the actual allocation within acceptable range of the target allocation. We refer to this process as "rebalancing." The process of rebalancing offers a systematic process to buy or sell securities when investment categories (asset classes) vary from its target.

Methods of Analysis for Selecting Securities

In analyzing portfolios, index funds, and ETFs, Johnson's Global Advisors use various sources of information, products provided by industry websites, and other online and subscription resources as needed. There can be no assurance that any such strategy or analysis will prove profitable or successful.

Risk of Loss Considerations

Prior to entering into an Investment Management Agreement with Johnson's Global Advisors each client should carefully consider:

1. That investing in securities involves risk of loss, which clients should be prepared to bear.
2. That securities markets experience varying degrees of volatility.
3. That over time, the client's assets may fluctuate and at any time be worth more or less than the amount invested.
4. That clients should only commit assets that are long-term in nature. This is typically a minimum of a ten-year time horizon. There can be no guarantee that an asset allocation strategy will meet its investment objectives or that it will not suffer losses.

Specific Risks of Securities

Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs)

An ETF is a type of investment company (usually, an open-end fund or unit investment trust) containing a basket of stocks or bonds that usually tracks a specific index or sector. An ETF is similar to an index fund in that it will primarily invest in securities of companies that are included in a selected market index or that fall into a particular sector. Unlike traditional mutual funds, which can only be redeemed at the end of a trading day, ETFs trade throughout the day on an exchange.

Like stock and bond mutual funds, the prices of the underlying securities and the overall market may affect ETF prices. Similarly, factors affecting a particular industry segment may affect ETF prices that track specific sectors. An investment in an ETF could lose money over short or even long periods. You should expect the ETFs share price and total return to fluctuate within a wide range, like the fluctuations of the overall stock market.

Index Fund

"Indexing" is a passive form of fund management that has been successful in outperforming most actively managed mutual funds. While the most popular index funds track the S&P 500, a number of other indices, including the Russell 2000 (small companies), the DJ Wilshire 5000 (total stock market), the MSCI EAFE (foreign stocks in Europe, Australasia, Far East) and the Lehman Aggregate Bond Index (total bond market) are widely used for index funds. Investing in an index fund is a form of passive investing. The primary advantage to such a strategy is the lower management expense ratio on an index fund. Also, a majority of mutual funds fail to beat broad indexes, such as the S&P 500.

Different Types of Funds

When it comes to investing in mutual funds and ETFs, investors have literally thousands of choices. Most mutual funds and ETFs fall into one of three main categories: money market funds, bond funds (also called ("fixed income" funds), and stock funds also called ("equity" funds). Each type has different features and different risks and rewards. Generally, the higher the potential return, the higher the risk of loss.

Bond Funds

Bond funds generally have higher risks than money market funds, largely because they typically pursue strategies aimed at producing high returns. Unlike money market funds, the SEC's rules do not restrict bond funds to high quality or short term investments. Because there are many different types of bonds, bond funds can vary dramatically in their risks and rewards. Some of the risks associated with bond funds include:

Credit Risk - refers to the risk that companies or other issuers may fail to pay their debts (including the debt owed to holders of their bonds). Consequently, this affects mutual funds and exchange-traded funds (ETFs) that hold these bonds. Credit risk is less of a factor for bond funds that invest in insured bonds or U.S. Treasury Bonds. By contrast, those that invest in the bonds of companies with poor credit ratings generally will be subject to higher risk.

Interest Rate Risk - refers to the risk that the market value of bonds will go down when interest rates go up. Because of this risk, investors can lose money in any bond fund, including those that invest only in insured bonds or U.S. Treasury Bonds. Funds that invest in longer term bonds tend to have higher interest rate risk.

Prepayment Risk - refers to the risk incurred when issuers choose to pay off debt earlier than the stated maturity date on a bond. For example, if interest rates fall, a bond issuer may decide to "retire" its debt and issue new bonds that pay a lower rate. When this happens, the bond fund may not be able to reinvest the proceeds in an investment with as high a return or yield.

Money Market Fund

An investment whose objective is to earn interest for shareholders while maintaining a net asset value (NAV) of $1 per share. A money market fund's portfolio is comprised of short-term (less than one year) securities representing high-quality, liquid debt and monetary instruments. Investors can purchase shares of money market funds through mutual funds, brokerage firms and banks.

Stock Funds

A stock fund's value can rise and fall quickly (and dramatically) over short or even long periods. You should expect a fund's share price and total return to fluctuate within a wide range. Overall "stock market risk" poses the greatest potential danger for investors in stock funds. Stock markets tend to move in cycles, with periods of rising prices and periods of falling prices. Stock prices can fluctuate for a broad range of reasons—such as the overall state of the economy or demand for particular products or services.

Not all stock funds are the same, for example:

Small Cap Funds

Small Cap Funds are funds that invest in stocks of small companies and involve additional risks. Smaller companies typically have higher risk of failure, and are not as established as larger companies. Historically, smaller company stocks have experienced a greater degree of market volatility than the overall market average.

Broad-Based Index Funds

An index designed to reflect the movement of the entire market. The smallest broad-based index is the Dow Jones Industrial Average with 30 industrial stocks and the largest is the Wilshire 5000 Total Market Index. Other examples include the S&P 500, Russell 3000 Index, AMEX Major Market Index and the Value Line Composite Index.

International Funds

International Funds are funds that invest in foreign securities and also involve special additional risks. International investments are subject to stock market risk as well as additional risks, including currency fluctuation, political instability, country/regional risk, and potential illiquid markets.

Emerging Market Funds

Emerging market investments involve stock market risk and the same risks as international investments. Investing in emerging markets may accentuate those risks.

Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) Funds

REIT Funds include REITs within the underlying fund holdings, REITs primarily invest in real estate or real estate-related loans, Equity REITs own real estate properties, while mortgage REITs hold construction, development, and/or long-term mortgage loans. REIT investments include liquidity and interest rate risk.

Alternative Investment Funds

An investment that is not one of the three traditional asset types (stocks, bonds and cash). Most alternative investment assets are held by institutional investors or accredited, high-net-worth individuals because of their complex nature, limited regulations and relative lack of liquidity. Alternative investments include hedge funds, managed futures, real estate, commodities and derivatives contracts.

ITEM 10.

OTHER FINANCIAL INDUSTRY ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS

We do not have any relationships or arrangements with broker dealers, mutual funds, other investment advisers, or other entities that create any material conflict of interest for us in rendering investment management services to our clients. As noted below under "Client Referrals and Other Compensation," we may periodically recommend that a client consult an unaffiliated individual or firm for specific professional services, such as financial planning, estate planning, or accounting-related work, but we receive no compensation or other monetary benefit for making such referrals. It is possible that such individual or firm will refer clients to us, but we pay no compensation for, and have no arrangement regarding, such referrals.

ITEM 11.

CODE OF ETHICS, PARTICIPATION OR INTEREST IN CLIENT TRANSACTIONS AND PERSONAL TRADING CODE OF ETHICS

Johnson's Global Advisors believes that we owe clients the highest level of trust and fair dealing. As part of our fiduciary duty, we place the interests of our clients ahead of the interests of Johnson's Global Advisors and our personnel. Our personnel are required to conduct themselves with integrity at all times and follow the principles and policies detailed in our Code of Ethics.

We attempt to address specific conflicts of interest that either we have identified or that could likely arise. Our personnel are required to follow clear guidelines from the Code of Ethics in areas such as gifts and entertainment, other business activities, and adherence to applicable state and federal securities laws. Additionally, investment personnel who make securities recommendations to clients, or who have access to non-public information regarding any client's purchase or sale of securities, are subject to personal trading policies governed by the Code of Ethics (see below).

Johnson's Global Advisors prohibits all personnel from acting upon any material, non-public information, as defined under federal securities laws and our Code of Ethics insider trading policy. Johnson's Global Advisors does not recommend securities in which there is a material financial interest to us or any related person of Johnson's Global Advisors. We will provide a complete copy of the Code of Ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

Personal Trading Practices

Johnson's Global Advisors and our personnel are permitted to purchase or sell securities for themselves, regardless of whether the transaction would be appropriate for a client account. Johnson's Global Advisors and our personnel will at times purchase or sell securities for themselves that we also recommend to clients. In order to avoid conflicts of interest with clients, we require all investment personnel to obtain written approval by our Chief Compliance Officer Martin V. Johnson Jr. before directly or indirectly trading in any security thus avoiding any chance of front running securities.

In order to avoid conflicts of interest with securities transactions in client accounts, Johnson's Global Advisors and personnel are subject to a pre-clearance policy that seeks to make personal trading consistent with our fiduciary duty to clients. However, Johnson's Global Advisors and our personnel are not required to pre-clear transactions in open-end investment companies (mutual funds) that would not adversely affect client interests. ETFs are required to be pre-cleared prior to investment personnel buy or sell transactions.

ITEM 12. BROKERAGE PRACTICES

Factors considered in selecting custodian:

Johnson's Global Advisors has authority to determine which securities, the amounts to buy or sell, a custodian to execute client transactions and commission costs for those transactions. Johnson's Global Advisors endeavors to select those custodians that will provide the best execution at the lowest commission rates and costs as possible. We will seek to shop custodial relationships every 3 to 5 years. The reasonableness of the custodial costs is based on the custodian's ability to provide professional services at competitive commission rates.

Johnson's Global Advisors low-cost trading techniques are specifically designed to minimize transaction costs. We incorporate directly into the portfolio construction process both commission and market impact costs. Execution venues include: crossing systems, dark pools, alternative trading systems, direct market access and program trading desks. Clients may direct the use of specific custodian for execution of trades. Directing brokerage may limit the ability of Johnson's Global Advisors to obtain best execution and may result in higher costs and/or less advantageous prices.

Johnson's Global Advisors generally requires that individual clients open one or more custodial accounts in their own names with Vanguard Advisors or Charles Schwab, Institutional clients are required to open a custodial account with their current custodian-or with the custodian of their choosing. The individual clients will enter into a separate agreement to custody assets. Johnson's Global Advisors also requires that each client grant Johnson's Global Advisors a limited power of attorney to execute client accounts. Johnson's Global Advisors is independently owned and operated, and unaffiliated with custodians. Custodians will charge brokerage commissions (transaction fees and/or ticket charges) for executing securities.

We do not receive any part of these separate charges; custodians provide us with access to their institutional trading and custody services platform, which is typically not available to their retail investors. Custodian services include custody, research, and access to mutual funds and other investments that are otherwise generally available only to institutional investors or would require a significantly higher minimum initial investment. We consider several factors in recommending custodian to clients, such as ease of use, reputation, service execution, pricing and financial strength. Johnson's Global Advisors also takes into consideration the availability of the products and services received or offered.

Research and Other Soft Dollar Benefits

Custodians make available to us other products and services that benefit Johnson's Global Advisors but may not directly benefit our clients' accounts. These types of services will help us in managing and administering client accounts.

These include software and other technology that provide access to client account data (i.e. trade confirmations and account statements); facilitate trade executions; provide research, pricing information, and other market data; facilitate in the payment of our fees from client accounts; and assist with back-office functions, record keeping, and client reporting. Many of these services are used to service all or a substantial number of our client accounts.

We place trades for our clients' accounts subject to our duty to seek best execution and other fiduciary duties. We do use other custodians to execute trades for client accounts maintained at current custodian, but this practice may result in additional costs to clients, therefore we are more likely to place trades through current custodian rather than other custodians. Custodian execution quality is different from that of other custodians. Custodians also provide us with other benefits and services such as client appreciation and educational events, and conferences on regulatory compliance, information technology, and business enterprise development.

Custodian may discount or waive fees they would otherwise charge for some of these services or pay all or a part of the fees of a third party providing these services to Johnson's Global Advisors. These benefits and services are not a material consideration for us in requiring clients use current custodian, however results in material conflicts of interest between us and clients.

As part of our fiduciary duty to clients, Johnson's Global Advisors endeavors at all times to put the interests of our clients first. Clients should be aware, however, that the receipt of economic benefits by Johnson's Global Advisors in and of itself again creates a conflict of interest and may indirectly influence our recommendation of a custodian for custody services. Johnson's Global Advisors does not receive client referrals, nor compensation or revenue from any custodian or third party in exchange for using that custodian or third party.

Directed Brokerage

We do not encourage individual clients to direct us to use a specific custodian to execute securities. Individual Clients are encouraged to use the custodian that Johnson's Global Advisors recommends.

Not all investment managers or advisors request their clients to trade through specific custodians. Since we request all of our clients accept our institutional clients to maintain their accounts with our current custodian, it is also important for clients to consider and compare the significant differences between having assets custody at another custodian, bank or other custodian prior to opening an account with current custodian. Some of these differences include, but are not limited to total account costs, trading flexibility, transaction fee/commission rates, and security and technology services.

By requiring clients to use our current custodian, Johnson's Global Advisors believe that we are able to more effectively manage client accounts, achieve favorable execution of client transactions, and overall lower the costs to the client accounts. In seeking best execution through a custodian on behalf of our clients, the determinative factor is not the lowest possible cost, but whether the transaction represents the best qualitative execution.

When taking into consideration qualitative execution, we consider the full range of custodial services, such as: historical relationship, reputation, financial strength, execution capability, commission and/or transaction rates, and responsiveness.

Aggregation and Allocation of Transactions

In most cases, Johnson's Global Advisors will recommend the purchase or sale of the same security for multiple clients at the same time. In those cases, Johnson's Global Advisors combines buy and sell orders for all clients with the same security order. These are sometimes referred to as "block" transactions.

Block transactions are typically done in an effort to get better trade execution across multiple clients accounts. Johnson's Global Advisors will generally allocate the securities or proceeds arising out of those transactions on an average price basis among the various participants in the transactions.

We believe that combining orders in this way will be advantageous to all participating clients. However, the average price could be less advantageous to a particular client than if that client had been the only account affecting the transaction, or if the transaction had been completed before or after the other clients. Johnson's Global Advisors also place orders for the same security for different clients at different times and in different relative amounts due to, among other things, differences in investment objectives, cash availability, size of order, and practicality of participating in "block" transactions.

The level of participation by different clients in the same security may also be dependent upon other factors relating to the suitability of the security for the particular client. There are circumstances when some of a client's transactions in the security will not be aggregated with those of other clients.

ITEM 13. REVIEW OF ACCOUNTS

Managed Account Reviews

We manage client accounts on a continuous basis and generally review all positions in client accounts at least quarterly. Martin V Johnson Jr. Portfolio Manager conducts internal monthly reviews of client accounts for adherence to a client's Investment Policy Statement. We also offer account reviews directly with a client on an as-requested basis.

Clients may choose to receive reviews in person (local in our office), via Skype, by telephone, or by email. Reviews mainly focus on changes to a client's IPS which include: a change in the client's investment objectives, general financial situation, tax considerations and material cash deposits or withdrawals in client accounts.

Account Reporting

Each client receives a written quarterly statement from the custodian that includes an accounting of all holdings and transactions in the account for the reporting period. In addition, Johnson's Global Advisors provides written reports detailing performance in client accounts on a quarterly basis. We may also provide additional reporting as agreed upon with the client on a case by case basis.
